Scott Cannon Rogers was born on July 20, 1957, in Salt Lake City, the second of seven children born to Clair W. and Alice Cannon Rogers. Shortly after Scott was born, the family moved to Seattle; however, they returned to make their home in Bountiful, Utah, where Clair Rogers worked as an assayer.

Scott spent most of his life in Bountiful. He enjoyed regular schooling but spent all the time he could in fishing, camping, bow practicing and when he was old enough he did a lot of bow hunting; he loved the great outdoors rather than going in for sports offered at school. Scott also worked with carpentry. He started working for a carpenter when he was 13 and learned the trade by doing it. He has used the trade to help pay for his education.

Shortly after graduating from high school, Scott participated in a survival trip conducted by the BYU. Soon after that, he met Peggy Ann Koplin, of Sandy, Utah; they and their friends enjoyed the early spring until the state parks started opening up, and it was time to look for work. Scott found employment at Brianhead Ski Resort, building cabins. Peggy worked at Zion National Park, and they continued dating as they were just a few miles from one another. That was a happy summer.

In the autumn, they decided to pool their savings and buy some property on which they would build their home. They looked in Payson, Farmington, Park City, and all the towns between. Then they came to Heber City and bought ground to the south of the road just below the second canal and above the Valley Hills project. They loved the view of the valley

Peggy Ann Koplin was born May 24, 1956, she was the second of five children born to Edward Glen and Carley Rexeene Colbert Koplin. Though born in Salt Lake, Peggy was raised in Sandy. Her father is a brick mason by trade. The home he provided was comfortable, but her parents were wise in letting the children hold jobs and to learn money management at an early age. Peggy worked summers in a greenhouse from the time she was 13 until she was old enough to find summer work away from home.

When Peggy graduated from Hillcrest High School in 1974, she learned to exercise self confidence. She and a girl friend decided to spend the following year in Conn. and be "Mothers Helpers."

Shortly after returning home from Conn., she met Scott Rogers. As has been told, they spent a happy summer at work in Utah's southern parks, and were married in the LDS Temple in Salt Lake in November of 1977.

Scott returned to the University of Utah where he majored in mathematics. He graduated with one of the highest grade point averages in his field. He holds a four year B.A. in math and is presently teaching math at Mountain High School in Orem. He is also the soccer coach.

The first three of their four children were born while Scott was still in school. The first born, Jacob Cannon Rogers, was born at the U of U Hospital on Sept. 1, 1978; Jenny Marie was born Feb. 26, 1980, in the LDS Hospital; as teaching in Orem.

In the spring of 1982, Scott secured a teaching position and it was time to start building their new home in Wasatch county. Full of hope and courage, they came to Heber City to get started, only to learn that they had been "taken" by the realtor with whom they had been dealing. He had sold them a building site and they had drilled a well where it was not legal to build, and the man had left the area!

They appealed to the County Planner, Robert A. Mathis, and he would see what could be done. Finally, in the early spring of 1984, they were told that they could start building their home, provided they completed their access road to certain specifications.

The children are very nice and friendly. They are active but obedient and they are beautiful. At home they are just as well behaved but a little more eager to see what is going on. I have a feeling the children are as anxious to have more space as their parents are.

Peggy said that she can hardly wait until she can plant a garden. She may want to start a plant nursery later on. She said that she hopes to make a good home for her family and have many good friends, now that she has learned most of the people here are kind and caring.

Scott was away working on the house while we had our interview, but Peggy said that he loves this area, and that he hopes the people here will help them make good and lasting friendships.
